HUTTON FORGED A MONEY ORDER.

Postoffice Authorities Trace
Man Who Cashed
$10 Paper.

REMOVED IT FROM A LETTER

When Mrs. Alice Monroe failed to get remittance from husband at Akron she reported the matter to the authorities.

Charged with opening a sealed letter addressed to Mrs. Alice Monroe, extracting a money order of $10, forging the endorsement and having it cashed at the postoffice here, Grover C. Hutton was arrested yesterday at Dawson by Postmaster A. E. Kurtz and Postoffice Inspector J. H. Williams. Hutton is being held at Dawson while Inspector Williams is in Pittsburgh taking the matter up with United States District Attorney Jordan and preparing to swear out a warrant in the United States court against the prisoner.

Hutton is alleged to have cashed the order at the postoffice here on August 8. The matter was not reported to Postmaster Kurtz until August 15 and since that time the suspect has been under surveillance. He is alleged to have confessed cashing the order and purchasing clothing with it.

Mrs. Monroe had been staying at Wheeler early this month and Hutton had called for her mail several times. She told him she was looking for a remittance from her husband with which she expected to return home. The letter never came. Mrs. Monroe wrote her husband, who took the matter up with the Akron authorities. Later Postmaster Kurtz was requested to ascertain whether the order had been cashed.

Fortunately for the authorities the orders for that period had not been sent to Washington and the order was found. It bore the signature of Mrs. Monroe and was endorsed to the payee of Grover C. Hutton. The investigation and subsequent arrest followed.

Season Tickets to Save Trouble

It was said today that the Connellsville Athletic Association is planning to sell season tickets next fall under an arrangement that will save purchasers from the annoyance that accompanied last season's arrangement. At the beginning of the season the purchaser of one of these tickets will select the seat he desires and it will be entered on his ticket. It will not be necessary for him to go to the box office before each game to get a seat check.

Last year season tickets were sold for $15. The matter has not been brought up as yet but there will hardly be any advance of price. It was stated today that next season there will be seating capacity for a crowd of almost any size that will attend the games.

Two Youngsters Comparing Ages

Two youngsters, who had evidently slipped away from their mothers, were on the 8 o'clock southbound car this morning. The youngest had got aboard at Scottsdale, and the other at Everson.

They knew each other and chatted together happily, comparing ages, as youngsters will, and relating some of their youthful experiences, and both seemed sorry that they had to leave each other at Connellsville.

The "kids" were Calvin Holmes of Locusts avenue, Scottsdale, aged six years, and Freeman Whaley of Everson, aged 82.

SACRAMENTO STATE FAIR.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 26.—(Special)—The California State Fair was formally opened this morning under auspicious conditions. The management has been working hard to make the exhibits of more than ordinary interest this year and the result has been the largest and best collection of agricultural, horticultural and live stock exhibits ever shown here. The entertainment features also are of an unusually high class.

Archbishop Riordan's Birthday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 26.—(Special)—The Most Reverend Patrick W. Riordan, Roman Catholic archbishop of San Francisco, will enter upon his seventeenth year tomorrow. The Archbishop was born in New Brunswick and was connected with the Chicago archdiocese for many years before coming to San Francisco in 1881.

Werner Banquets Bachelors' Club

The members of the Bachelors' Club were ghosts last evening at a well appointed banquet given by Robert Werner at his home on Sixth street, West Side. Mr. Werner is a member of the club and also a recent bachelorette. When the club was organized several years ago, a rule was that the members who entered the bonds of matrimony were to banquette the other members of the club. Since the organization of the club, four of the members have married. They are Harvey Slocum, Oliver Slocum, Edgar Hinckley and Robert Werner. The rule of the club has been well carried out by the bachelorettes. The members of the club including the four already named are Herman Englehart, John Rhodes and Louis Etzel, Connellsville; Elmer Schuhle, Ursina, and Calvin L. Lohr, of Johnston. The deceased member is Albert Sauter.

The absent members last evening were Edgar Hinckley and Herman Englehart. The banquet which was served at 7 o'clock was perfect in all its appointments. The club colors, gold and black, were attractively carried out in all the rooms. Following the banquet the guests adjourned to the upper porch where a business meeting was held. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: President, Robert Werner; Vice President, John Rhodes; Secretary, Oliver Slocum, and Treasurer, Harvey Slocum.

Wife Sees Thugs Slay Her Husband

United Press Telegram.
NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—While Mrs. Philip De Carmelis sat at a front window at her home in Corona, Long Island, this morning waiting for her husband, she saw him attacked by two thugs; saw a knife flash and her husband fell to the sidewalk. The woman screamed as she rushed out of her house to her stricken husband's side.

She tried to lift him up and carry him into the house but De Carmelis was dead, with a knife thrust in his heart. The police are now searching for the slayers. Just what in back of the murder has not been ascertained.

The wife of the murdered man told the police that neither she nor her husband had received any threatening letters from anyone. The murder of De Carmelis is the third within a week in that section of Long Island,

Annual Election of Church Officers

The annual election of church officers will take place tomorrow morning at the close of the regular services of the Methodist Protestant church, Tuesday, September 6, Rev. R. L. Cairns, the pastor, will go to Allegheny to attend the annual Methodist Protestant conference of the Pittsburgh district which convenes at that place.

Tomorrow evening Rev. Cairns will exchange pulpits with Rev. S. K. Spahr, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church of Uniontown.

Races All Off; Track Too Wet

Last night's hard rain put an end to the racing program at Dawson and the card for today, postponed from yesterday, was abandoned. The track was muddy and not in condition for the speed contests.

The horses began shipping their animals off last night and this morning.

The fast string will leave this afternoon. There was great disappointment over the postponement, which could not be avoided, because of the line of the program of the first three days and promise that this year's races would have been the most successful ever held at the Dawson Driving Park.

Young Men's Institute Meeting.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Aug. 26.—The annual convention of the California grand council of the Young Men's Institute began here today with the reception of the numerous delegations arriving from all parts of the State. Tomorrow there will be a street parade, followed by the celebration of a special mass in the open air. The indoor sessions, beginning Monday and continuing three days, will be liberally interspersed with entertainment features.

To Nominate Madero.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 26.—(Special)—The national convention of the Progressives will convene here tomorrow to adopt resolutions and to formally nominate Francisco Madero, for the presidency of the republic.

THE DEATH LIST IS NEARLY THIRTY.

List of the Seriously Injured Reaches Nearly Forty.

PROPRIETORS FUSS; SQUIRE GETS CASE.

Squire Clark Hears the Cross
Suit in Ohiopyle Dispute.

ATTORNEY HIGBEE ORATES

Makes Eloquent Plea to Have Case
Dismissed Because of Triviality But Charles Pew is Held Under Bell For Assault on Harry Marietta.

Attorney E. C. Higbee appeared before a Squire's court for the first time in many months last evening and proceeded to deliver one of his eloquent addresses that used to fail to delight an audience. Last evening he argued against sending a trivial case into court, declaring that not within the memory of attorneys before the bar has a conviction been secured; that seldom does such a case get beyond the Grand Jury, and that in any event it would be purely a question of costs.

The prosecution was that brought by Harry Marietta charging Charles Pew with simple assault. The parties in the case conduct hotels at Ohiopyle. When Mr. Pew requested Mr. Marietta's guests not to use the Ferncliff dancing pavilion last Saturday night the trouble started. Mr. Pew claimed his own guests were in such numbers to crowd the floor, and for this reason asked the other not to dance.

Sunday Marietta sent word by the Ferncliff porter that he intended "trains" Pew as a result of the ombudsman. The men met at the depot Monday morning. Marietta accosted Pew, intending, as he boasted at the hearing last night, to "make him apologize." Mr. Pew brandished a cane and Marietta picked up a stone, but no blows were struck.

Mr. Pew claimed, at the hearing last evening, that Marietta threatened to punch his eye out with a stone. Marietta said he was afraid Pew would hit him with the cane he carried.

Hixson argued that Marietta, 15 years old and sturdy, was more than a match for Pew, who is 60. He recurred from Marietta's admission that but for the fact that Pew entered a prosecution first, he would not have gone to law about the matter.

Several witnesses were examined. Attorney E. F. Younkin, for Marietta, argued that brandishing the cane constituted the assault, and there was nothing to do but send the case to court. Higbee argued at greater length that Pew was trying to avoid Marietta, who forced him to back more than 20 feet; that he brandished the cane in self defense, and that the case was too trivial to be given serious consideration in any event.

Squire Clark volunteered to divide the costs and dismiss the case, but this was not satisfactory and the defendant was bound over for court under $200 bail. E. T. Norton going his security.

Musical Treat at Shady Grove

Those who attended Ralph Reed and his Premier Band concert at Shady Grove park yesterday had an unexpected pleasure in the singing of Miss Lella Royer, dramatic soprano. She sang the "Jewel Song" from Faust, "The Nightingale," by Penn and other numbers, her really beautiful voice bringing her great applause and arousing the audience to genuine enthusiasm. Miss Royer possesses a dramatic soprano voice of rare quality and has a striking personality which created great interest. Her repartee of the daintiest art from "Faust" was thoroughly artistic and according to operatic tradition.

The concert given by Reed proved to be the best band performance heard in Fayette county in a long time. The bandmaster and his Italian players are real musicians and render all of their numbers with ease and pleasure. Their concerts vary in nature of the music and most everybody enjoys the program throughout. They play the liveliest of classics, give several catchy pieces, and the variety pleased the most exacting lover of music. The concert will be given again this afternoon and evening.

SKINNY MEN WILL BE STYLISH THIS FALL.

The most radical changes for many years will be apparent in men's clothes this coming Fall.

The coats will be shorter and narrower and the trousers will be pretty close fitting with almost no fullness over the hips. In fact, pegtop trousers are a thing of the past.

The general tendency of the new styles is to give men that tall slender appearance.

In the new woolens, diagonal weaves have the fall, while the colorings mostly desired will be the now blue gray shade, with brown a next best favorite, of course the conservative blues, grays and black will also be worn.

We are indebted for the above information to Dave Cohen, the tailor, who has just returned from New York, bringing with him every thing that's new in woolens and fashion plates.

Stand Collapses, Hundreds Hurt

United Press Telegram.
ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 25.—Just as the first of the ten great racers in the Elkin national trophy race flashed past the judges' stand in the first lap of a 16 miles an hour clip a long section of the western end of the temporary grandstand collapsed bearing 600 men, women and children in the debris.

TO KILL THE DANDRUFF QERM.

is the Only Possible Way of Having an Effective Cure.

If you see a woman or man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin brittle hair, they owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herpicide tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ burrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling hair and baldness can only be had by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

Entertained by Rev. and Mrs. Palmquist, wife's Read.

Rev. and Mrs. E. A. E. Palmquist entertained the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church last evening at the church manse in W.H.P. Road. The meeting was the semi-monthly one and was well attended considering the inclement weather.

A short business session was held and a delightful reading was given by Mrs. Palmquist. Later in the evening refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held in the form of a basket picnic. Mrs. Joseph Dixon, president of the club, who has been out of town practically all summer, returned home yesterday afternoon and last evening presided over the meeting.

MISSIONARY MEETING

Hold Yesterday at the Home of Mrs. Harry Hetzel.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry Hetzel on South Third street, West Side. The meeting was largely attended and was one of much interest. Reports of the Executive Board meeting held in May were given by Mrs. Lloyd Johnston, Mrs. R. E. Calfee and Miss Martha Babbage. The reports gave a full account of the year's work.

A delightful social meeting was held and dainty refreshments were served. The next meeting will be in the form of a rally and will be held at the home of Mrs. William Murie.

THE ONWARD CLASS

Holds Meeting at the Home of Mrs. Mary Bowman.

The Onward Class of the Methodist Protestant church met last evening at the home of Miss Nancy Bowman on Vine street. The meeting was well attended. It was decided to set aside a week in September to be devoted to sewing. A room will be secured and each afternoon and evening in the week a certain number of young ladies will assemble to make comforts, sunbonnets, etc.

The fund derived from the sale of the articles will be kept separate from the other church fund and will be used for defraying the expenses of the cleaning of the church next summer. Refreshments were served and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

SUNDAY EXCURSION

To Ashtabula Harbor, Ohio. Special train leaves P. & L. E. station 6:30 A. M., City Time, Sunday, Aug. 27th, returning same evening. $1.75 round trip.

Dance at Shady Grove. A dance will be held next Monday evening at Shady Grove park under the chairmanship of J. Donald Reid, J. Montgomery Dilworth and Malcolm Scott. The hours are from 8 until 12 o'clock. A special street car will leave here at 7:30 o'clock.

Mission Band Meeting. The Children's Mission Band of the Christian church held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon in the church. Mrs. J. L. Kurtz and Mrs. Edward Marsh were in charge. Refreshments followed the business meeting.

Ladies' Circle Meeting. Business of a routine nature was transacted at the regular meeting of the Ladies' Circle of the Christian church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. A number of bills were ordered paid.

THE STEWARDSHIP OF SENATOR PENROSE.

Democrats and renegade Republicans frequently refer to Senator Penrose as the boss of the Republican party of Pennsylvania, and it is certainly true that he is the most powerful man in the Senate. He is by no means discreditable to the Senator's character nor to the judgment of the Republican State leaders. Senator Penrose has risen to be the chief of the Pennsylvania Republican organization only because of his wise leadership. The American people, like the mule, may be led, but they cannot be driven; for this reason there are few real political bosses in the country. Every leader must make good or get out. He must at all times be patient and reasonable, or face sudden rebellion which usually crushes him. Senator Penrose has been infinitely patient in Pennsylvania politics and indomitably industrious in defending Pennsylvania interests at Washington, where as Chairman of the Finance Committee he fills the exalted and responsible position of Republican leader of the Senate. He has been accused of basism in that he used his influence to promote the nomination and election of candidates of his personal choice, but it yet remains to be proven that his recommendations were ever unworthy; on the contrary, the Republican administration since his leadership began has always been clean. It will be remembered that the Capitol scandal arose under the administration of Governor Pennypacker, for whose election Senator Penrose was not responsible.

It is, therefore, no surprise that Senator Penrose should openly declare himself utterly opposed to unworthy municipal candidates in his home city even though they may have hitherto always affiliated with him in politics and supported him, his measures and his candidates. Philadelphia has been for years notorious as a city that was and is "corrupt and contented." This has been due to the fact that the corrupt influence has been too dominant in the administration of its government. Concerning this writer as applied to the present condition Senator Penrose says plainly and emphatically that it does not meet with his approval and will not have his support. He declared himself in favor of a clean candidate, and says:

Any candidate which relies on corruption, fraud, evasion of office holders and police intimidation is confessedly weak and unworthy of support, and no party success can be based upon it.

These are the words of a Patriotic Citizen and not of a Political Boss. THE SUCCESS OF REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT AND REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES IS HIGH ABOVE THE AMBITIONS OF ANY CANDIDATE. This is the Boss Rule of which we hear so much in the Organs of Opposition. COULD THIS BOSS BE BETTER OR THIS RULE WISER?

THE HEAVY FIRING OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The Uniontown Herald having referred to certain county officials as having "been under heavy fire for over a year," the Prohibition People's Tribune is moved to remark:

"Official" here means the County Commissioners. "Heavy fire" refers to the malicious attacks made by The Herald, principally upon one of them. Who DIDN'T Mr. Langley divide up the campaign? Who paid for advertising and other expenses? Who's holding the Herald's howling howitzer? Must have thought it was only a harmless little popgun that some of the boys were playing with down there.

The Herald's fire has certainly been somewhat of a continuous performance, but though incessant there are no evidences that it has been damaging to those against whom it has been directed; on the contrary, there is room for suspicion that some of the gunners have suffered from backfire.

Democratic weather.

The Town Picnic has dropped out of sight.

J. Phylus is on the job.

The mud dog, like the poor, we always have with us. It seems we just can't lose him.

Connellsville has been introduced to the harem skirt, but the introduction comes a trifle too late.

The Fayette county doctors went to Hillman and rode on the bosom of the lake, but being experienced sailors nobody suffered and no more.

Pedrosoius sometimes spells Patriotism.

The Philadelphia Vares had better vary their political tactics. Something is going to drop.

Just the same that cartoonists have of Senator Penrose is made of right substantial stuff.

Ohioopyle falls are not as big as those of Niagara, nor are the rapids below them quite as terrible as those of the Gorge, nevertheless the Devil River claims many victims.

The South Connellsville citizens are trying to organize a new borough or the New England town meeting plan.

Basketball is preparing for the coming season.

SHOVELS TO CLEAN SCHOOL BUILDING.

Janitors at Scottdale Will Probably Have to Use Them

ON ACCOUNT OF THE MUD

Slowness in Getting Chestnut Street Hill Paved Presents Dreary Outlook for School Cartakers and Good Housewives of Mill Town.

Special to The Courier,
SCOTTDALE, Aug. 26.—Taking an opinion from the rains that fell nearly all day yesterday in conjunction with the slow degree of accomplishment that marks the work of paving the Chestnut street hill, the janitors at the High School and Chestnut Street school buildings will have to do their work mainly with street scrapers and street brooms. Present signs tend to indicate that the paving is far off and with autumn rains the deposit of mud on the hill will be in evidence during the opening weeks of school.

The imagination of the most optimistic observer is compelled to admit that several hundred children tracking large portions of mud, which they will have to do if the present conditions last during the opening week of school, will soon plaster the floors of the two buildings with several inches of yellow clay. It is certain that the most painstaking janitor will be unable to have them all clean their shoes before entering, and it is equally certain that the children when they return home, each with their pedal exuberance encased in mud, will do nothing to drive good housewives to distraction. The wear and tear on school houses and homes will be considerable. The work is going much slower and is being carried on by a much smaller force of men than satisfies most people. Why the condition exists seems to be more or less of a dark mystery, and its solution appears to be far off.

One of the first things done on the alley leading down behind M. B. Porter's, Dr. S. W. Newman's and the United Brethren church forced itself into prominence with the rainfall. The alley along which ran a water table for many years became a dumping ground for contractors' wagons when the Chestnut street excavating was done, the wagons dropping their loads in the alleys which run at right angles from Chestnut street. The water table was closed up, and when the rains came they swooped down from the hill, over mountains of earth, and dumped themselves against the rear end of the stables. At M. B. Porter's there was a mare and colt in the stable. The colt was loose and with an instinct of self-preservation got out of the stable and was found on Mr. Porter's lawn yesterday morning. Mud was piled up a couple of feet high against the stable door at the rear and a couple of hours of hard shoveling were required to get the doors open.

Not content with attacking the back doors the flood executed an attack at Market street, carrying debris of all kinds down the hill and depositing it on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Porter's, so that he and his family had to emerge from their home yesterday by way of the lawn, avoiding the puddle on the corner entirely. Other houses along that stretch were less hampered by the debris, but they were noticeable for their accumulations of new mud.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

Given Rev. Ryland by Members of His Congregation.

Thursday evening the congregation at Leisnengron dropped in on Rev. Ryland and spent a very pleasant evening. One feature that delighted the mistress of the manse was the abundance of good things they brought along and left behind when they went away.

Rev. Ryland has supplied the Leisnengron church (including Leisnengron and West Leisnengron) for over a year. In that time nearly thirty new members have been added and nearly $2,000 expended on repairs and otherwise. It is hoped that steam heat can be added this fall, connecting with the Frick company's line near the store.

The tower of the church will also be repaired. This church has three Sunday schools with over 100 pupils enrolled and forms one of the greatest mission fields in Fayette county.

DIES OF PARALYSIS.

Former McKeesport Resident Stricken at Fishing Camp.

BELLEVILLE, Pa., Aug. 26.—(Special)—Frank Miller, aged about 60, died Thursday evening in the Fayette County Home at Uniontown, following a stroke of paralysis last Monday. Miller had been working in a fishing camp on the Monongahela river when he was stricken, and as he had no friends about here who could care for him, he was at once sent to the poor house. While an effort was being made to locate a wealthy brother in Scranton, he died.

A telephone message to Scranton disclosed that the brother, George, was away from home with his family, and could not be located. Some McKeesport friends promised to take the matter up and give the body decent burial, Miller having formerly been in the hotel business there.

PENROSE DENOUNCES CONTRACTORS' RULE

Senior Senator Comes Out Flatly for Candidate Earle.

IN FIGHT IN PHILADELPHIA

For the Mayoralty Nomination, Urging Friends of Good Government to Unite on Candidate Who Represents Clean Politics.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—Overshadowing all other political events of the day in Philadelphia, United States Senator Helen Penrose yesterday issued her promised statement in support of George H. Earle as candidate for Mayor at the primaries.

Mr. Penrose says the reign of contract rule, declared Philadelphia's politicians have been the subject of much criticism throughout the State for many years and adds:

"Any candidate which relies on corruption, fraud, coercion of officeholders and police intimidation is confessedly weak and unworthy of support and no lasting party success can be based upon it."

He is specific in his attack on the Vare. The statement, in part, is as follows:

The so-called contractor leadership of the Republican organization of Philadelphia, for so long known to the subject of criticism and reproach through the State. Thousands of intelligent voters have undoubtedly been driven to vote against the Republicans because of the corruption and the situation becomes a definite factor in the elimination of a candidate for the office of Mayor or city councilman.

The Vare Contracts.

Edwin H. Vare is one of the largest and richest contractors in the city. He is backing the candidacy of his brother, William H. Vare, who has grown rich in association with him.

The Vare contracts, involving millions of dollars, will run into the next century. They are now in progress now in litigation in the courts and some more are soon to become involved in litigation. This situation involves a proposition which I am not willing to compromise or yield by any means. There is no alternative to immediate action. I have no desire to interfere in local affairs and I have never done so, but I am a citizen of Philadelphia by birth and residence and holding us in a position of more responsibility and responsibility to the Republican party. I feel that it is a duty to the people of Pennsylvania to record my protest and I would record the same protest against the candidacy of the Vare or any other municipal contractor.

For Republican Success.

Above all I have at heart the success of the Republican party in Pennsylvania and in the nation. In the coming contest I hope all will rally to the defense of the great principles of Republicanism—protection to American industries.

Local issues, usually touching the welfare and prosperity of citizens and political parties, and the prosperity and happiness of hundreds of thousands of workers are dependent on the success of the Republican party.

I am convinced that among all those who are mentioned George H. Earle is the most probable to succeed in the contest in a vigorous way and he has the courage and ability to carry it to a successful conclusion. He has all the qualifications to make a splendid Mayor and to start this great city on the road of progress and prosperity. There should be a concentration of friends of good government and decent Republicans upon some one candidate, and it seems to me that such concentration should be made immediately upon Mr. Earle.

More to Say Later.

I have been closely confined in Washington since March. In fact since last December when I prolonged my trip to prevent Blackwood from legislation, and I take the first opportunity on my return home to express my views candidly to the people of Philadelphia.

I shall have more to say later on as the occasion may arise, but one thing which relies on corruption, fraud, coercion of officeholders and police intimidation is confessedly weak and unworthy of support and no lasting party success can be based upon it.

It could not be better to recall the practice and conduct of the politicians in the present campaign. It is a disgrace to every honest Republican, it is a violation of every principle of justice, it is a violation of every law and will be met and repudiated fearlessly and without consideration for any one who may be hurt.

RESULTS TELL

There Can Be No Doubt About the Results in Connellsville.

Results tell the tale. All doubt is removed.

The testimony of a Connellsville citizen.

Can be easily investigated.

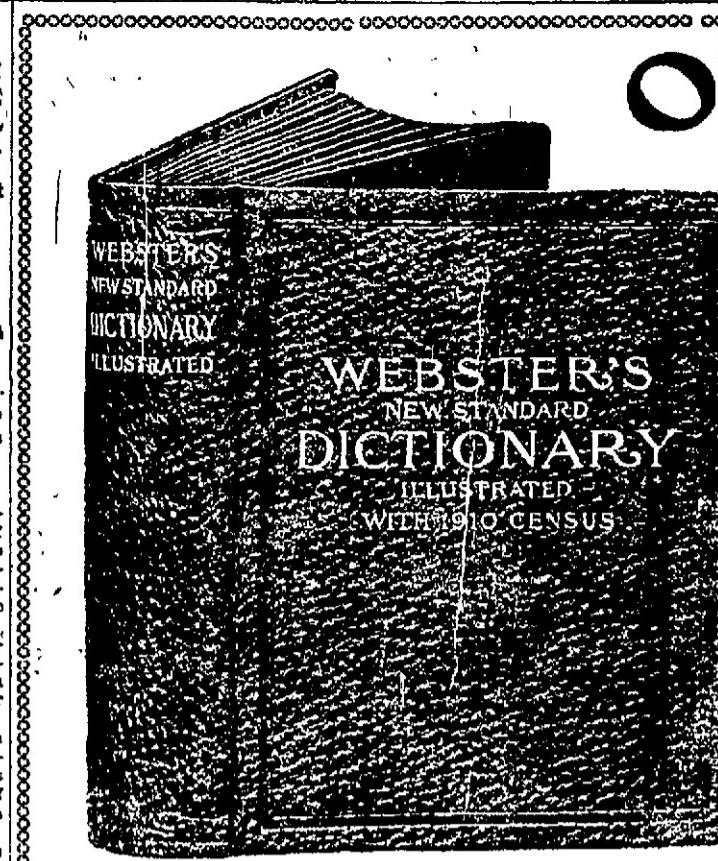

What better proof can be had?

Mrs. Lawrence Francis, 111 Tenth Street, Connellsville, Pa., says, "Dawn's Kidney Pills cured me of a severe attack of kidney trouble about five years ago and I have had no recurrence of it. This remedy has also been used by other members of our family with the most satisfactory results." It now calls to bring prompt relief from hypertension and kidney disorders. I also Dawn's Kidney Pills highly and am glad to recommend them to other persons who may be suffering with any symptoms of kidney trouble." Statement given Oct. 7, 1911.

On Oct. 12, 1909, Mrs. Francis was again interviewed and added the following to her former statement: "My former statement still holds good. The relief I obtained from kidney trouble through the use of Dawn's Kidney Pills has been permanent."

Paintings from Life

THERE is no other dictionary published that can boast of so many FULL PAGE illustrations in colors. It is customary to present only small "marginal" pictures that do not properly illustrate, but merely suggest the object. When one looks up the word "dog" in a dictionary, it is of little consequence to see a "mongrel" illustrated, but in Webster's New Standard Dictionary one will find true illustrations of the various breeds of dogs which show their relative sizes and distinguishing features drawn to exact scale from life, by some of the world's greatest painters. Thus it is with horses and other animals, as well as with flowers and fruits. These are illustrations that not only interest, but instruct. The accompanying gives but a slight idea of a full page illustration the color values of course being lost in reproduction.

WHY THEY WENT ON BIG STRIKE.

British Railway Employees
Give Side of Their Troubles.

UNDERPAID AND OVERWORKED

While Roads Declare Enormous Dividends—Pension Fund Really a Source of Income to Employers and of Little Benefit to Men.

A few thousand shareholders in the railroads of Great Britain divide among themselves each year the enormous sum of $210,000,000. There are fifty-one highly paid managers, who receive salaries of $1,100 per week. One general manager who directs a small Scotch line gets $25,000 a year.

Now, as an offset to these high priced people there are 130,000 employees whose average wage is less than $5 per week, while another 360,000 average $5.60 per week. Altogether there are about 634,000 employees in these low earning positions.

When a previous strike was threatened evidence was given before the labor commission that many employees worked seventy hours per week for $3.30. The railway workers get less wages per man than any other trade in England.

The following statement was made by an employee of a British railway and throws considerable light on the recent strike situation and recites in part the grievances behind the present industrial upheaval in the United Kingdom:

"At the Beginning.
"I began life in a signal box as a lad, earning $1.50 per week. Every other Sunday I had to work for nothing. I suppose it was because I was only a boy and couldn't help myself. At the same time if my time was worth anything it ought to have been paid for."

"When I was old enough to handle baggage and do the work of a porter around the stations I got 60 cents more a week for two years and then I was raised to $2.50 per week. Though doing a grown man's work, I only got $2.50 per week for two years, because there is a rule by which one cannot get more than this sum until one is eighteen years old, no matter what work he does."

"Besides doing portering, I had to do 'flogging' or putting up signals on the track when required. This work is very dangerous, but we got no extra pay for it whatever. Sometimes after a full ten hour day portering, or pulling heavy baggage, I have to go on 'for duty' nearly all night, especially in December, when we have those heavy fogs. The railway gives us an extra p.c. for this, but allows us 12 cents' worth of 'grub.' They would not have allowed us the 12 cents' worth of 'grub' only the men used to get so hungry they would quit work to get food, and that endangered the lives of passengers. So the company gave us the allowance of actual food, but no increase of money."

"For our first twelve hours' work of 'flogging' we get, as I said, 12 cents' worth of 'grub.' If out work lasts longer than twelve hours we get another 18 cents—in 'grub,' not money. Working all day as a parcel porter and then working all night at 'flogging' is pretty rough. It is a wonder more trains don't go to smash, the men are often so exhausted and sleepy. Some of the men meet with accidents at times because they get too tired to look sharp every instant."

Wages $5.28 a Week.

"My wages are now 22 shillings ($5.28) per week, out of which the company each week takes 18 cents for what it calls 'provident and pension.' That is to give us a pension after we get to sixty-five years. But, let me tell you, mighty few of us live that long; if you leave the company after paying into this fund for ten years you don't get a cent back. It is all velvet to them. Every single man—married ones, too—must pay into this fund. The company must get a snug little sum, considering that so few reach the pension age."

"As a mere porter and without fogging I work ten full hours a day and often have extra work at night. For the night work all the extra pay I get is 44 cents. I have often worked from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. and then right on to 8 a. m. next morning, just getting this 44 cents and no more."

"The company allows us no time for food, so we have to snatch it when we get a chance. This means doing heavy work often on insufficient food and sometimes without any at all. Some of this work is very dangerous, as we often have to get down on the tracks and shift parcels from one platform to another. Men are often killed by passing 'specials.' The parcels often weigh 150 to 200 pounds."

"I am married and support as best I can a wife and one child on $5.28 per week. Less 18 cents for 'provident and pension,' less $1.80 per week for two rooms for rent in a slum quarter, less, say, 32 cents for coal, leaves $2.00 for self, wife and baby."

Protection.
"I understand that you don't speak to your neighbors."

"Not any more than necessary," replied Mr. Groucher. "Of course they are the neighbors, but we also have a dog cook, and we don't care to have them get acquainted with us."—Washington Star.

Petty Thieves Pestering Dunbar

Special to The Courier.

DUNBAR, August 26.—Burglars are beginning to prowl around again. On Thursday night the garden of Grant Hall was visited, and the cabbage patch was visited, enough being taken to do several families a number of weeks, or to make a good sized barrel of kraut. On Friday morning at 5:30 the home of Alex McConnell, Sr., was visited, the prowler coming to the front door and demanding entrance. Mrs. McConnell went to the window which was on a screen and ordered the man away or she would shoot. The party left the door and jumped over the fence. Mrs. McConnell got a good description of the intruder. It was a man dressed in woman's clothes for Mrs. McConnell saw his trousers when he lifted his skirt to jump the fence to the road and as there is an acre right not very far from the McConnell residence. Mrs. McConnell could furnish a good clue.

A few nights before some one tried to open the night-lock on the front door as a key was found in the door early the next morning.

CALLED IN THE DOCTOR.

Then He, and the Patient Found They Were Two of a Kind.

In the Metropolitan theater the house physician has a seat given him for each performance. He is supposed to be there every evening. Naturally there comes a time when the play begins to pall on him. One evening not long ago the stage manager of a local playhouse rushed down the aisle to the doctor's seat and whispered: "Come back at once. The leading lady has had an attack."

In the lady's dressing room all was confusion. "What'll we do, doc?" cried the stage manager.

"Have you powder water on her head?"

"Yes, a whole bucket, out of the one that says 'Not to be used except in case of fire.'"

"Then don't pour any more. I fear you have made a fatal mistake. Run out to the drug store and get this oil."

When they had run out the lady opened her eyes. "Doc," she gasped, "you're a good fellow, ain't you? I know you know there's nothing the matter with me. I want a day off, and I don't want to go on in this act. Can you fix it?"

"I sure can," he answered, wringing her hand sympathetically. "I ain't a doctor. I came in on his ticket. We'll fix it!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ARMLESS PAINTERS.

Sarah Biffen, For Instance, Who Made Remarkable Miniatures.

Mrs. Sarah Biffen was a conspicuous example of the skill which armless people sometimes acquire in spite of their affliction. She was miniature painter to Queen Victoria, and her work was widely known for its beauty and delicacy.

She was born without arms, but as a girl, having a great wish to become an artist, she worked earnestly for years until she could paint by holding the brush in her teeth. In 1821, according to the Rajah Yogo Messenger, the judges, without any knowledge of the means she was compelled to use, awarded her the gold medal of the Society of Arts, a prize sought by boudoirs of others.

M. de Menthobert and Bertram Hines were other artists who were deprived of the use of their arms. The former had only one foot, which he used to paint with.

Mr. Hines lost both his arms in an accident, being run over by a street car when he was only eight years old, and when he was just beginning to acquire skill in drawing. He spent two years in patient toil learning to draw by holding the pencil in his teeth, at the end of which time he won a first class certificate from a local art school.

An Antidote Handy.

The woman was the author of a cook-book that had been published at her request with wide margins and occasional blank pages for notes and additional recipes. Often she had expressed a wish to see an old copy of the book and had out to what use the blank spaces had been put. One day in a secondhand bookstore her husband unbound an old volume, noticing that it had been annotated freely, he bought it. After a day or two he said:

"How about the notes in that cook-book? Were they interesting?"
"No," she said curiously; "they didn't amount to anything."

When he got a chance he looked through the book himself. Every note the book contained was a remedy, for dyspepsia and stomach trouble.—New York Times.

A Regular Sherlock Holmes.

Under the caption "A Triumph of Saxon" "Jugend" tells this story: "In the lower court of a small town in Saxon William had sorred faithfully and well as attendant to the preceding judge for many years without ever having received any reward aside from its legal stipend. On the day of adjournment for the season, when visitors had retired, the judge, who was also about to leave, asked, 'William, do you smoke?' Seeing a square box under the judge's arm, he answered respectfully, 'Yes, your honor.' I know it by the smell of your coat,' said the judge as he walked out."

Protection.
"I understand that you don't speak to your neighbors."

"Not any more than necessary," replied Mr. Groucher. "Of course they are the neighbors, but we also have a dog cook, and we don't care to have them get acquainted with us!"—Washington Star.

LATEST PICTURE OF BEULAH BINFORD, WHO IS WITNESS FOR DEFENSE IN THE BEATTIE TRIAL.

RICHMOND, Aug. 26.—Beulah Binford, the 17-year-old "affinity," so called, of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., posed once more for a photograph just before she left the jail to ride out to the crossroads courthouse in Chesterfield county where Beattie is on trial, accused of the murder of his wife. The girl, who at the last moment announced her intention to testify in Beattie's favor, was looking over a scrapbook in which were pasted pictures showing the latest fashions in women's wear when the photographer caught her. As usual, she was smiling and apparently happy despite the unpleasant notoriety which she has received because of her relations with young Beattie.

DR. WALKER OFFERS TO SELL A FINGER.

Will Give Digit to Mrs. Waldorf For Money to Build Hospital.

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf of Philadelphia, a widow, who advertised for a "living right index finger," can buy the desired member if she likes from no less person than Dr. Mary Walker, the woman who wears trousers. Dr. Walker has sent this letter to Mrs. Waldorf:

Dr. Reginald Waldorf—I have just read that you desire to purchase a right index finger. Will you give me enough to erect a hospital in my ward on my estate at West N. Y.?

I have saved hopeless cases, and because I decline consumption it not contagious money is not forthcoming to erect a ward.

I finish this letter not using my index finger.

MARY E. WALKER, M.D., Surgeon of War 1841-65.

P. S.—If return ticket is sent will come immediately so you can decide if my finger is desired by yourself.

Mrs. Waldorf desired a finger to replace one she lost in an accident. She is reported to be independently wealthy and capable of paying almost any price for a finger, provided it suits her. She believes that the finger can be grafted on her hand and that eventually she will have a perfect one. Dr. Walker is eighty-one years old.

She figured prominently in the civil war as a surgeon and was one of the first women suffrage workers in the country. For years she has worn man's attire. She is anxious to erect a hospital for consumptives, and in a note she says she would sacrifice much more than a finger if it were possible to realize her dream.

The LASH of CIRCUMSTANCE

by HARRY IRVING GREENE
Author of "Yosonde of the Wilderness"
Illustrations by Magnus G. Kastner

"I had now the chain of proof connecting you with the crime forged with the exception of one link, which could I suppose would make it practically unbreakable. On one of the smuttings which had been blackened by burnt powder was a faint good imprint of a right thumb. I tore off the fragment of paper containing it, and by placing it under the microscope could distinctly trace the lines. Of course such lines are not the same on any two persons in the world; and could I get an imprint of your thumb and by comparison find that they corresponded, there could then be no further doubt as to your hand being the one that had committed the same. But this was a difficult thing to do without arousing your suspicion. I finally got around it, however, by organizing our burglary for the double purpose of getting the print and calling to your attention the probability of your having lost your card case in your previous climb. I told you at the time that I expected to get the proof from one who would not suspect that he had furnished it until I denounced him, and I guess I was correct. I don't believe it entered your head that you were making the evidence as you went along by which I could send you to the penitentiary. Neither did you suspect that I meant you when I told you if I ever unraveled the knot it would be because of the assistance and dues you had given me. Incidentally I might say that the office we burglarized belonged to a friend of mine who loaned it to me for the purpose. I had you stamp your thumb against the ball of soft putty and got an excellent impression of it, which I have had experts compare with the faint lines on the blackened paper. They assure me that they were both made by the same thumb."

It was a good thing that LeDuo had possessed the foresight to render me helpless and secure my revolver. In the frenzy of the moment I certainly would have used it upon one or both of us. I turned upon him desperately. "Do you think any jury would believe such evidence as that and convict me?" I demanded huskily. He wrinkled his forehead.

"I am sure I don't know. One can never tell. Do you want to give a jury the chance?" I made no answer and we sat in silence, the coldness of death upon me, my companion unmoving, but lax eyed. Then once more he addressed me, and through his tones ran the old familiar friendliness of days long gone by.

"I know that you are not a criminal at heart, Tom. I am sorry, very sorry for all this, and I should regret very much to see you go to the penitentiary. But if you wish me to assist you, you must make a clean breast of the affair. I have any of your uncle's money left?" I could only groan. Despairing and helpless I threw myself upon his mercy.

"No, I used it for further speculation after I was wiped out the first time. I was way ahead of the game until today, but now I am wiped out completely. I am penniless and in debt. I can repay absolutely nothing—can offer no compromise. You will have to do as you please with me," LeDuo whistled.

"I wondered if you had got bitten today for the second time when I read that Underground had blown up. So that ends my prospects of getting any feed for a lot of hard work." He looked quite downcast for a space, then brightened up and continued more cheerfully.

"But really that does not matter so much after all, for I can worry along without it. If I could only have found that some one besides an old friend had done this thing I would not be disatisfied with my job. But there is a thing or two which I don't understand. I don't believe you had a duplicate key, for I don't believe you ever contemplated such an act until you were driven desperate by the calamity. I have gone upon the assumption that you quarreled with your uncle the day before the robbery on purpose that you might have an excuse for throwing down the key and absenting yourself from the house during the night. That being the case, how did you enter?"

"When I left the house after the quarrel I threw the catch which prevents the door from locking. Of course it would snap shut as usual, but could then be opened from the outside by the knob. I had no idea that any one would think of looking to see that the door locked itself when it was shut on that day any more than any other, and of course no one did. I was therefore enabled to come in without a key, and when I went out after replacing the tools, and with the money in my pockets, I restored the door to its usual condition, leaving it locked." LeDuo looked at me with a frown.

"That was a thing I never did puzzle out to my own satisfaction; yet it was the simplest thing of all. When I think how rudimentary it is, it makes me disgusted with myself to think that I didn't solve it. All of which goes to show what blunderers we all are when we think we are doing something extremely clever. Another thing along that line which I should like to know is this. Did you put that half-burned cigarette where I found it in the hall?"

"I did not; I know nothing about it." The detective drew it from his pocket and looked at it reflectively.

"I showed it to you that day downtown merely to create the impression in your mind that I had Bruce under suspicion and had not thought of you in connection with the matter. He probably threw it there thoughtlessly in his trouble as he entered the house on the morning we were all there together. Now I am satisfied that you drugged the poor devil, and I know that you had the cabinman send him to that resort. That was bad enough in itself, but when I remember also that you tried to fasten suspicion upon him I am inclined to lose all sympathy for you which I might otherwise have. To my mind your treachery in that respect is by far the worst element of your offense. I can understand how a man's infatuation for a woman may sometimes lead him to dishonesty or even bloodshed, and under those circumstances I am liable to have a lot of charity for him. But when he attempts to put a friend whom he knows is innocent into a felon's cell and thus destroy him and the happiness of a sweet woman, he does an act unworthy of any one who possesses the semblance of humanity or decency."

"LeDuo," I cried brokenly, "whatever else I say you may believe or not as you see fit, but when I tell you this I want you to believe me implicitly. I had absolutely no idea of trying to fasten it on Bruce. I told you and everybody else from the beginning in the strongest language that I could command that I did not for an instant believe that he could be guilty. Neither would I have permitted him to be punished for the crime. If he had been tried and convicted I should have confessed, come what might. But I know he would not be convicted, because I was certain if he had no other alternative he would tell where he spent the night. I did not know how he came in possession of the key, and simply told you I had seen him have it, because I wished to appear as telling you all that I knew, and having no idea but that Bruce would immediately account for it. I admit that I dropped a drug in his cocktail, and that I was the one who told the cabinman where to take him after he fell unconscious upon the seat, but that was for an entirely different purpose than to try to incriminate him. I made him unconscious merely out of fear that he would return to my uncle's house in another attempt to borrow money and possibly roll into my bed for the night as he has sometimes done, thus interfering with my plans. And I had him conveyed to the place he was taken to instead of to where he was known for the reason that I did not wish his friends to see him in that condition and think he was intoxicated. I had no idea that he would be suspected of this affair, for I did not know he would be so obstinate about refusing to tell where he had been, nor did I know that he would deny having had the key; while as for the cigarette I had nothing to do with it. Therefore I supposed he would awake in the morning, come away, and that no harm would have been done. And when I feared that by reason of several accidents he was in danger of being suspected, I said everything I could to clear him except to acknowledge my own guilt."

"I am glad that you have explained that the way you have. I like you a whole lot the better for it. But how about your mentioning the fact of the money to Mrs. Dace, and why did you cough as you choked your uncle? Was that an attempt to implicate Mackay?"

A Scene from "The Nest Egg," at the Sisson Theatre Tuesday Evening.

make a good citizen out of him again, than to wreck him by the disgrace of his having been a convict. You have learned your lesson and I have no fear of your ever becoming a rogue again. But you have resigned your position, forfeited all claims to consideration upon the part of your uncle, and ought to keep as far away from him in the future as you reasonably can. It seems to me as if there was but one thing for you to do, and I want you to do it. Go away and make a new start somewhere else where everything you see will not be a reminder of this period in your life. You will be able to do better work, and more hopeful work, among other surroundings. Your secret will be safe with me. I will tell your uncle that I have been unable to recover the money and will throw up the case. Will you agree to do as I have suggested if I release you?"

It was by only way of escape, and the wisdom of the advice seemed to beyond doubting. With my bosom almost bursting, and staring straight ahead through dimmed eyes, I assent ed. "I will go almost immediately. But there is one thing which I must do before leaving. I must first see Mrs. Dace. I moan, and have a long talk with her—perhaps several of them—and that may delay me for a few days. I love her better than all else in the world, and if she really cares for me, maybe she will give me another chance to recover myself financially. Of course, she will never know that I did this and perhaps—perhaps—" My voice broke and I choked as I vainly attempted to finish my sentence. I heard the click of a lock and felt the handcuff fall from my wrist.

"You have something more to learn which it hurts me to tell. You, but which you must know. I have taken it into consideration in deciding to let you go. It is a part of your punishment, and while it will be bitter you must bear it like a man. You will hardly see Mrs. Dace again. Richard Mackay has left the city for parts unknown, deserting his family and taking Mrs. Dace with him. The yellow evening papers are full of it."

With the floor beneath me heaving like the deck of a reeling ship, I staggered and fell upon my knees before the heel, burying my face in it. Under the horror of that moment all strength left me and I sobbed brokenly.

I might be crushed in the crash. And he succeeded perfectly. Mrs. Dace, being exonerated by him that I was ruined, and probably having been wavering somewhat between us; preferring me, but being tempted by his wealth, hesitated no longer when she became satisfied that I could not give her what she had made up her mind to have. Realizing as I did all along that we never could have been happy without considerable money, I would not have blamed her particularly for making the choice that she did had not Mackay been a married man. Even as it is, I bear her no ill will and do not believe that she was an immoral woman. There was a great deal of good in her, but she was shallow and cared little for the sufferings of others provided she gained the wisdom of the advice seemed to beyond doubt. With my bosom almost bursting, and staring straight ahead through dimmed eyes, I assented. THE END.

Hired Crowns. To economical minds there must be a certain waste implied in the making of a new crown for every queen. Yet this has been the rule. Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria both had crowns made for them, and it was Queen Alexandra who was the first to rebel against a hired crown. "I will not wear a hired crown," she said to the minister who was discussing the matter with her. "Do you think it right I should?" "Madam, the late King (George V) wore one." "Well, I will not. I do not like it. I have jewels enough to make one for myself." "In that case," interposed the king, "they will have to pay for the setting." "No, replied Alexandra. "I will pay for it all myself." And this was the course adopted.

Fifty Years Ago.

The titanic struggle between the North and South was being waged. The semi-centennial of this greatest of all modern wars makes everything pertaining to it of peculiar interest at the present time, and a stirring Civil War story is particularly appropriate now. It is for that reason we have arranged to print:

Under the Horror of That Moment All Strength Left Me.

My Lady of the North

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Bob Hampton of Places," "Keith of the Border," etc.

This is the greatest of all the great historical stories Mr. Parrish has given to American readers. It is a swift, intense, adventurous romance, with some mystery, as much action as is possible to crowd into one story, plenty of realism of what may be termed the romantic variety, and a glow which will enlist your sympathies as well as your attention.

On as black a night as any daring soldier could ask, a cavalry captain rode out from the Army of Northern Virginia to carry certain dispatches from General Lee through the Union Lines. The officer is Captain Philip Wayne, and a gallant Virginian in every sense of the word. He is at once plunged from one dangerous adventure into another, and the dashing style in which he describes them will keep you enthusiastic and fairly breathless in your effort to keep up.

You Will Not Want to Miss a Single Line of the Story and We Strongly Advise You to Watch for the Opening Chapter

WHICH WILL APPEAR IN MONDAY'S ISSUE.

United Wins From Farmers

The United second team and the "Farmers," an amateur organization of Greensburg, came together on the latter's grounds last Thursday and in an exciting game United won by a score of 1 to 1.

Hieblis, the "Farmer" pitcher, allowed but six hits and struck out 13 men; but with three passed ball and six errors the handicap was too great to be overcome.

A second game was started but in the fourth inning a dispute arose over a decision. United refused to continue and the game was called.

Makes Simplified Spelling Very Easy

"She blushed when he crept her." That sentence is not an example of poor spelling, but of simplified orthography.

Those who wish to follow the Rooseveltian idea and eliminate unnecessary letters from the words will find The Courier's Dictionary a ready aid.

One wit remarked when he first saw examples of simplified orthography: "Is that simplified spelling? Why, I have always spelled that way."

But he had not. There are rules and "reasons why" in simplified spelling as in everything else that are the result of scientific investigation and arrangement.

The Courier's Dictionary contains the results of the careful study and work of the simplified spelling board organized under the auspices of an draw Carnegie and Theodore Roosevelt to reform our orthography.

All the rules for making your spelling is simple or not, the means of getting the dictionary that thousands are talking about is simplicity itself.

She coupons and an expense bonus are still good for the book you have heard about.

Scottsdale a Closed Town Today

Special to The Courier

SCOTTDAL, Aug. 26.—This morning opened fair and pretty, in spite of the gloomy, rainy day preceding it and the night when much more rain fell drearily and discouragingly to those who planned to attend the two big picnics in this section. The one of the mill men and their friends to Idlewild drew a big crowd, while from all over the county the Mendon Grange picnic at Buffalo attracted the farmer folks.

On account of these two outlays, which brought the country people to town yesterday and caused the buying usual on Saturday to take place yesterday the stores were all kept open late. The grocermen especially were hard worked and it was really heavier than Saturday, for besides it all the regular Saturday orders had to be sent out yesterday.

The conditions this morning vindicated the faith of "Mokey" McAdoo the Bridge street weather prophet, who insisted during all the rain yesterday and while it was pouring down last night that this morning would be fine. The rain has been worth big money to the farmers at least.
